

Hello my friends...

Welcome back to easy English The Podcast...

In this episode you will learn your English Level.

Do you know your real English level?

Today's video is very very important for you.

Are you just starting to learn English — you're a beginner?

Can you speak a little — maybe your elementary level?

Do you understand English well — maybe you're an intermediate?

Or can you speak easily — like your upper-intermediate?

Maybe you already speak fast and clear — your advanced level?

Or maybe... you're an expert — someone who speaks English naturally, like a native.

Today, you will find out.

Because in this one video, you will listen to a story —

A story that starts simple... and becomes harder step by step.

It is the story of Ali — a boy who starts from zero English, and learns to speak fluently, confidently, and freely.

Each part of this story has a new level.

From beginner... to expert.

Each level will test your English listening and understanding.

So listen carefully.

Repeat after me.

And see how many parts you can understand.

Because this story is not just about Ali —

It's also about you.

Let's begin your English journey... together.

If you're a regular viewer thank you so much for choosing this channel for English learning.

Part number 1: Beginner Level sentences.

Ali is a young man.

He lives in a small town.

He wants to learn English.

He thinks English is important.

Every morning, he wakes up early.

He drinks a cup of tea.

He goes to his English class.

His teacher is very kind.

She smiles and says, "Good morning!"

Ali says, "Good morning, teacher."

There are many students in the class.

They come from different places.

Ali sits in the front row.

He listens carefully.

The teacher writes on the board.

Ali reads slowly.

He repeats after the teacher.

He learns new words every day.

Sometimes he forgets them.

But he tries again.

He likes learning English songs.

He likes watching English cartoons.

He practices speaking with his friend.

His friend's name is Amir.

They speak English after class.

They help each other.

Ali makes mistakes, but he doesn't stop.

He says, "Practice makes perfect."

At home, he writes new words in a notebook.
He reads them before sleeping.
His mother says, "I am proud of you."
Ali smiles.
He wants to speak English fluently.
He dreams of traveling abroad.
He wants to meet new people.
He wants to understand movies.
He listens to English songs every night.
He writes small sentences in English.
He practices every day.
Sometimes it is hard.
But Ali says, "I can do this."
He studies with energy.
He listens with care.
He speaks with confidence.
He learns step by step.
He is happy with his progress.
He feels stronger.
He knows this is only the beginning.
Ali's English journey has started.
He is ready for the next level.

Part number 2: Elementary Level sentences.
After a few weeks, Ali's English got better.
He could understand simple questions.
He started watching short videos in English.
He tried to read easy stories.
Sometimes, he uses an online dictionary.
He learned ten new words every day.
One afternoon, he went to a coffee shop.
He wanted to order something by himself.
When the waiter came, he said,

“Hello, can I have a cup of tea, please?”

The waiter smiled.

“Sure! Would you like milk or sugar?”

Ali thought for a second.

“Just milk, please,” he said politely.

He felt proud of himself.

It was his first real conversation in English.

After finishing his tea, he saw a girl reading a book.

He wanted to practice more.

“Excuse me,” he said. “What are you reading?”

She looked up and smiled.

“It’s a story about travel,” she said.

They talked about books for a few minutes.

Ali told her about his English class.

She said she was also learning.

They laughed together.

Ali learned some new phrases from her.

When he went home, he wrote them in his notebook.

He practiced them again and again.

He wanted to improve every day.

At night, he watched a movie with subtitles.

He understood some sentences.

He repeated them out loud.

He learned how people really speak.

He noticed their pronunciation.

He tried to copy it.

It was fun and exciting.

He felt like English was coming alive.

Sometimes he makes mistakes.

But he didn’t feel shy anymore.

He remembered what his teacher said:

“Don’t be afraid to speak.”

Ali followed that advice.

Every time he spoke, he got better.

Every time he listened, he learned faster.

He was proud of his progress.

English was no longer strange to him.

It was becoming his friend.

And Ali was ready for the next level.

Okay

Part number 3: Intermediate Level Sentences

Ali joined an English conversation club at school.

There were students from different countries.

They met every Friday afternoon.

The club helped him practice speaking.

He enjoyed learning from others.

Sometimes they played word games.

Sometimes they discussed interesting topics.

Ali loved it.

During one meeting, he made a funny mistake.

He said, "I am boring," instead of "I am bored."

Everyone laughed kindly.

Ali laughed too.

The teacher explained the difference.

Ali said, "I will never forget that."

From that day, he became more confident.

He realized that mistakes were part of learning.

He started to talk more.

He listened carefully to others.

He asked questions.

He learned to use tenses correctly.

He could now talk about his past and future.

He could express his ideas clearly.

Sometimes, he even helped other students.

His pronunciation improved a lot.

He began to understand English movies without subtitles.

That made him very happy.

He started writing short stories.
He wrote about his family, his town, and his dreams.
His teacher liked his writing style.
She said, “Your English is growing fast.”
Ali smiled proudly.
He worked harder than ever.
He started learning idioms.
He used them in daily conversations.
He said things like “It’s raining cats and dogs.”
He found learning fun.
He read English blogs and articles online.
He followed English YouTubers.
He shadowed their speech.
He learned new expressions.
He was not afraid to speak anymore.
People noticed his improvement.
Even his teacher said he sounded natural.
Ali felt stronger every day.
He knew there was still a long way to go.
But he was ready to take the next step.
Because English was becoming part of his life.

Part number 4: Upper-Intermediate Level sentences

Ali applied for a job at a local bookstore.
It was his first interview in English.
He prepared carefully for days.
He practiced common interview questions.
He rehearsed his answers in front of a mirror.
He wanted to sound confident and natural.
On the day of the interview, he wore a white shirt.
He arrived early.
The manager smiled and said, “Please, have a seat.”
Ali thanked him and sat down.

“So, tell me about yourself,” the manager began.

Ali took a deep breath.

“I’m a student,” he said, “and I love books.”

“I’ve been learning English for almost a year.”

“I believe reading helps me grow as a person.”

The manager nodded.

“Why do you want to work here?”

Ali replied, “Because I want to be surrounded by stories and help others find theirs.”

The manager smiled.

He seemed impressed.

They talked for twenty minutes.

Ali answered every question politely.

He made only a few small mistakes.

But he didn’t lose confidence.

He felt proud just to have tried.

A week later, Ali got a call.

He was hired.

He couldn’t believe it.

It was a dream come true.

He was going to use English at work every day.

He talked to customers.

He recommended books.

He helped foreign visitors.

He learned new words from them.

Every day was a new lesson.

Sometimes, people praised his English.

That made him even more motivated.

He started writing in English journals.

He joined online speaking groups.

He made friends from all over the world.

English has become his second language.

He spoke with confidence and joy.

He was ready for bigger challenges.

And one day, a challenge came.

Part number 5: Advanced Level sentences.

Ali's school invited him to give a speech.

The topic was "How English Changed My Life."

At first, he was nervous.

Speaking in front of hundreds of people was scary.

But he prepared with passion.

He wrote his ideas clearly.

He practiced his pronunciation.

He wanted every word to sound natural.

When the day arrived, he walked onto the stage.

He looked at the audience and began:

"English has opened countless doors for me."

"It has connected me with people from every part of the world."

"At first, I was afraid to speak."

"But I realized that mistakes are just steps toward fluency."

"The key is not perfection — it's consistency."

"Fluency doesn't come overnight."

"It grows slowly, through daily effort."

"I used to study English for grades."

"Now, I learn for life."

"Language is more than words — it's a bridge between hearts."

The crowd listened quietly.

Ali's voice grew stronger.

He spoke about his early struggles.

He shared his first conversation at the cafe.

He mentioned the laughter from his mistakes.

He smiled as he remembered those moments.

He said, "Every small effort counts."

"Every word brings you closer to confidence."

"When you speak from the heart, people understand."

The audience clapped loudly.

Some people even stood up.

Ali felt proud and emotional.

After the event, a teacher said, “You speak like a native now.”

Ali laughed.

He said, “I still learn something new every day.”

He knew fluency was not an ending.

It was an endless journey.

He decided to help others learn too.

He became a volunteer English coach.

He helped students believe in themselves.

He reminded them that fear kills progress.

He taught them to love the process.

He shared his story with passion.

And his words inspired many.

He was no longer just a learner.

He was a mentor.

And he knew what was coming next.

Part number 6: Expert Level sentences.

Ali started working as a motivational English mentor.

He spoke at international events.

His English was fluent, confident, and expressive.

But more than that, it was inspiring.

He taught students that fluency is not about accent.

It's about courage, clarity, and confidence.

One student asked him, “Sir, how did you master English?”

Ali smiled gently.

“I didn't master English,” he said. “I mastered patience.”

“I failed many times, but I never gave up.”

He explained that language is not a subject — it's a journey.

"It grows with you," he said. "It changes with you."

He spoke about thinking in English.

He shared how he stopped translating.

He told them, "Your mistakes are proof that you're trying."

He encouraged them to speak without fear.

He said, "Perfection is boring. Progress is beautiful."

He believed in daily practice.

He believed in listening deeply.

He believed in living the language.

His students admired his wisdom.

They learned more than grammar from him.

They learned their attitude.

They learned confidence.

Ali became a role model.

He wrote blogs about learning.

He recorded podcasts in English.

He shared stories from his journey.

He connected with learners worldwide.

His voice became known online.

People loved his way of speaking.

It was natural, simple, and powerful.

He received invitations to speak abroad.

He traveled to London for a conference.

He gave a talk titled "Fluency Beyond Fear."

The audience gave him a standing ovation.

Ali smiled and said, "Fluency is freedom."

"It's not about being perfect."

"It's about expressing who you are."

He thanked everyone and ended with a message:

"Keep learning. Keep speaking. Keep believing."

That day, Ali realized — he had become the person he once dreamed to be.

Not just fluent. Not just confident.

But truly free.
