

Hello my friends.

today's episode is very very important and super special for you.

Because

In this video you can listen

a simple, powerful daily routine

from the moment you wake up...

to the moment you fall asleep.

Follow every sentence.

Repeat with me.

Shadow with me.

And feel the difference

in your English...

and in your day.

Your routine starts now.

I wake up around 7 AM.

My eyes open slowly,

and for a moment,

I just lie still and breathe.

The room is quiet.

The air feels calm.

And I remind myself

that a new day has started.

First, I stretch my arms and legs.

I move my neck gently

to relax my muscles.

Then I sit up slowly on my bed

and take a deep breath.

This helps my mind wake up without stress.

I tell myself,
“Today will be a good day.”
These simple words
give me a little motivation.

I stand up
and walk to the bathroom.
I wash my face with cold water.
The cold water wakes me instantly and makes me feel fresh.

After that, I brush my teeth
and clean my face properly.
“I try to start my morning with a peaceful and positive mind.”
“I try to start my morning with a peaceful and positive mind.”

I change into clean clothes.
Sometimes I wear comfortable clothes.
Sometimes I dress for work.
It depends on my plan for the day.

Then I make my bed.
A clean bed makes the room look better,
and it makes my mind feel organized.

I open the window
to let fresh air come inside.
A little sunlight
makes me feel more alive.

Sometimes I drink a glass of water.

Sometimes I make tea
to warm my body.
It depends on my mood.

While drinking,
I stand near the window
and look outside for a moment.
This small quiet time helps me prepare for the day.

Next, I check my phone
to see any messages or reminders.
But I don't use the phone too long because it can waste time.

"I try to control my morning, instead of letting my phone control me."
"I try to control my morning, instead of letting my phone control me."

If I have energy,
I do a short 2-minute stretch.
Just simple movements
to wake up my body.

Then I sit at my table
and plan my day.
I think about the tasks I must complete and the things I want to improve.

Hard Sentence (double repetition):

"I try to create a clear plan so that my day feels organized."
"I try to create a clear plan so that my day feels organized."

Sometimes I write the plan.
Sometimes I think about it mentally.
Both help me focus.

Before I start my work,
I take another slow breath
and say to myself:
“I will do my best today.”

This small sentence
gives me confidence.

Now my morning is ready.
And I am ready
for the rest of the day.

After finishing my morning routine,
I begin my main work for the day.
I sit at my desk,
take a deep breath,
and prepare my mind to focus.

I look at my to-do list
and choose the first important task.
Starting with one clear task helps me avoid stress.

Hard Sentence (double repetition):

“I try to stay focused on one task at a time, instead of doing everything at once.”

“I try to stay focused on one task at a time, instead of doing everything at once.”

I open my notebook
or my computer
and begin working slowly and calmly.

In the first few minutes,
my mind sometimes feels sleepy,
but once I start,
my energy becomes stronger.

I remind myself,
“This work is important.
This work will help my future.”

As I work,
I try to sit straight
and keep my back comfortable.
Good posture helps me stay active.

Sometimes I listen to light background music.
Sometimes I work in complete silence.
It depends on what helps me concentrate better.

After 25 to 30 minutes of work,
I take a short break.
I stand up, walk a little,
or stretch my body gently.
This small break
refreshes my mind.

“I give myself short breaks so that my mind stays clear and fresh.”
“I give myself short breaks so that my mind stays clear and fresh.”

Then I return to my work with new energy.

If I feel stressed,
I pause for a moment
and take slow breaths.
Breathing helps reduce pressure and brings back focus.

Sometimes I face difficult tasks.

Sometimes I don't understand something immediately.

But I don't panic.

I take it step by step.

Hard Sentence (double repetition):

"I remind myself that challenges help me grow stronger."

"I remind myself that challenges help me grow stronger."

Throughout the day,

I keep moving from one task to another.

Some tasks take time.

Some tasks are easy.

But I keep going

slowly, calmly, and consistently.

I try not to waste time

on useless scrolling

or unnecessary distractions.

If my phone rings,

I check it quickly

and then put it away

so I can continue my work.

I drink water

to stay hydrated.

I also take small breaks

to rest my eyes

because looking at screens for too long can make me tired.

As the day moves forward,
I look at my list again
and check the tasks I have completed.
Each checkmark
makes me feel productive.
“I try to finish my work with patience instead of rushing.”
“I try to finish my work with patience instead of rushing.”

After finishing a big part of my work,
I sometimes meet my friends
to relax my mind
and enjoy good company.

Before I leave home,
I check my phone
to see if anyone has arrived
or sent a message.

I put on comfortable clothes
and get ready to go out.
Meeting friends
always brings a little excitement.

When I reach the place,
I see my friends waiting.
We smile, shake hands,
and say our usual greetings.

We find a nice spot to sit,
maybe in a small café,
a park,
or someone's home.
The place doesn't matter—
the people do.

We start talking about our day,
our work,
and our plans.

We share small stories
and small problems.

Hard Sentence (double repetition):

“I enjoy listening to my friends because their stories make me feel connected.”

“I enjoy listening to my friends because their stories make me feel connected.”

Sometimes we laugh
about funny things that happened.

Sometimes we talk seriously about life, study, and future goals.

Being around good friends always gives me positive energy.

If someone has a problem,
we talk about it
and try to help them feel better.
Good friends always support each other.

Sometimes we order tea,
cold drinks,
or snacks.

We eat slowly
and continue our conversation.

Hard Sentence (double repetition):

“I try to be fully present with my friends, instead of thinking about work.”

“I try to be fully present with my friends, instead of thinking about work.”

If we stay outside,
we walk around the area
talking, joking, and relaxing.

If we sit at home,
we watch videos
or listen to music together.

No matter what we do,
the time feels light
and stress-free.

Meeting my friends
is like giving my mind
a small vacation.

Before leaving,
we talk about our next meetup,
or any future plans
we want to do together.

We say goodbye
with a smile
and promise to stay in touch.

Hard Sentence (double repetition):

“I feel grateful because good friends make life easier and happier.”

“I feel grateful because good friends make life easier and happier.”

After meeting them,
my mind feels refreshed.
My heart feels calm.
And I feel ready
to continue the rest of my day
with new positive energy.

After meeting my friends
or finishing the last part of my work, evening slowly arrives.

The light becomes softer,
the air becomes cooler,
and everything starts to feel calm.

When I reach home,
I sit down for a moment
to rest my body.

Sometimes I drink a glass of water.
Sometimes I make tea
to relax myself.

I take a deep breath
and let my mind settle.

Evenings are the time
when I review my whole day.
I think about the things I completed and the things I still need to do.

Hard Sentence (double repetition):

“I try to slow down in the evening so my mind can feel peaceful again.”
“I try to slow down in the evening so my mind can feel peaceful again.”

If I have small tasks left,
I complete them slowly
without rushing.

Sometimes I clean my room a little or organize my desk.
A clean space
helps my mind stay clear.

After that,
I usually spend some time
with my family.
We talk about our day
and share simple moments.

Sometimes we eat together.
Sometimes we just sit together.
These small moments
bring warmth to my heart.

Hard Sentence (double repetition):

“I enjoy quiet evenings because they help me reconnect with myself.”

“I enjoy quiet evenings because they help me reconnect with myself.”

If I have free time,
I go outside for a short walk.
The evening air
feels soft and peaceful.

Walking helps me relax
and release any stress
I have carried all day.

Sometimes I listen to music or watch a short video to entertain myself.

But I try not to use my phone too much
because too much screen time
makes my mind tired.

As evening becomes night,
I start preparing myself
to slow down even more.

I look at my tasks for tomorrow
and make a simple plan.
Planning for the next day
helps me sleep without worry.

Hard Sentence (double repetition):

“I prepare my mind for a calm night by organizing my thoughts.”

“I prepare my mind for a calm night by organizing my thoughts.”

Before I move to my night routine,
I take one last quiet moment
just to breathe
and feel thankful for the day.

My body feels tired,
but my heart feels calm.
This is the beauty
of a peaceful evening.

After my evening routine,
I sometimes go out to play cricket.
Cricket is one of my favorite ways

to relax my mind
and refresh my body.

Before leaving home,
I change into comfortable clothes.
I put on my shoes
and check if I have everything—
my bat, my ball,
and sometimes my gloves.

I send a quick message
to my friends or teammates
to ask where they are playing today.

When I reach the ground,
I see everyone warming up,
stretching,
and getting ready for the game.

The field looks open and fresh.
The sound of the ball hitting the bat
makes me feel excited.

Hard Sentence (double repetition):

“I love the energy of the ground because it makes me feel alive.”

“I love the energy of the ground because it makes me feel alive.”

We choose teams
and decide who will bat first and who will bowl first.

Sometimes I bowl first,
and sometimes I bat first.
It depends on the team’s decision.

When I hold the bat,
I feel confident.
I look at the bowler,
take a deep breath,
and prepare for the ball.

The first ball comes fast.
I watch it carefully
and hit it with my full focus.

Sometimes it goes far.
Sometimes it doesn't.
But I enjoy every moment.

Hard Sentence (double repetition):

"I try to stay calm while playing, even when the game becomes intense."
"I try to stay calm while playing, even when the game becomes intense."

If I am bowling,
I take a short run-up
and throw the ball
with good speed and direction.

Sometimes I get a wicket.
Sometimes I don't.
But every delivery
teaches me something.

We laugh,
we shout,
we cheer,
and we enjoy the game
as a team.

Cricket helps me forget
all the stress of the day.
I feel free
and light
when I play.

Hard Sentence (double repetition):

“I enjoy cricket because it refreshes both my body and my mind.”
“I enjoy cricket because it refreshes both my body and my mind.”

When the game ends,
we talk for a few minutes
about the best shots,
the funny moments,
and the mistakes we made.

Then we say goodbye
and plan the next match.

I walk home slowly,
still feeling the excitement
of the game.

After I return home from playing cricket,
my body feels tired,
but my mind feels relaxed and happy.

I sit down for a few minutes and let my breathing slow down.
I drink a glass of water
to cool my body
and refresh myself.

Sometimes I take a quick shower
to wash away the sweat and feel clean.

The warm water
helps my muscles relax
after a long day.

After showering,
I change into comfortable night clothes.
I want my body
to feel light and peaceful before sleep.

Then I go to my room
and sit on my bed
for a moment of quiet.

Hard Sentence (double repetition):

“I try to disconnect from the whole day and bring my mind into a calm state.”

“I try to disconnect from the whole day and bring my mind into a calm state.”

Sometimes I scroll my phone for a while,
but I try not to use it too long
because too much screen time
makes my mind active when I want it to sleep.

If I feel like watching something,
I choose a short, relaxing video.
Nothing loud,

nothing stressful.

Sometimes I talk to a family member or reply to last messages that I missed during the day.

After that,
I check my plan for tomorrow.
I look at the tasks I need to complete and set my mind
for the next day.

Hard Sentence (double repetition):

“I prepare my mind for tomorrow so I can sleep without worries.”

“I prepare my mind for tomorrow so I can sleep without worries.”

Before lying down,
I turn off the bright lights
and switch on a soft, warm light.
It makes my room feel peaceful and cozy.

I lie down slowly
and adjust my pillow
so I feel comfortable.

I take a deep breath
and let my body relax completely.

Sometimes my body is tired,
but my mind is still active.
Thoughts come and go,
moving quickly.

Hard Sentence (double repetition):

“I try to focus on my breathing instead of the thoughts in my mind.”

“I try to focus on my breathing instead of the thoughts in my mind.”

I close my eyes
and imagine something peaceful—
like the sky,
a quiet beach,
or an empty road at night.

Slowly,
my mind becomes lighter.
My thoughts become slower.

My body feels heavy,
my eyelids feel soft,
and I feel ready
to fall asleep.

Before I sleep,
I remind myself:
“You did your best today.”
These simple words
give me comfort.

Then I let myself drift
into a calm, deep sleep,
ready for a new day tomorrow.
