

Did you get my message?

Your turn.

Did you get my message?

Good.

You say this when you want to know if someone received your text.

What have you been up to lately?

Repeat now.

What have you been up to lately?

Very good.

We use this when asking about someone's recent activities.

That really made my day.

Say it again.

That really made my day.

Nice.

You say this when something makes you very happy.

Things are getting better now.

Your turn.

Things are getting better now.

Good.

This sentence is used when the situation is improving.

How did everything go?

Repeat now.

How did everything go?

Great.

You use this when asking about results.

There's something I need to discuss.

Say it again.

There's something I need to discuss.

Good.

You say this when you want a serious conversation.

That wasn't easy to handle.

Your turn.

That wasn't easy to handle.

Nice.

We say this when a situation is difficult to manage.

What do you think about it?

Repeat now.

What do you think about it?

Very good.

You use this to ask for someone's opinion.

That's a huge improvement.

Say it again.

That's a huge improvement.

Good.

This means there has been big progress.

It took longer than expected.

Your turn.

It took longer than expected.

Well done.

You say this when something needs more time than planned.

Everything worked out in the end.

Repeat now.

Everything worked out in the end.

Nice.

We use this when the final result is good despite problems.

That's something worth trying.

Say it again.

That's something worth trying.

Good.

You say this when an idea deserves an attempt.

No one saw that coming.

Your turn.

No one saw that coming.

Very good.

We say this when something is completely unexpected.

This place feels different now.

Repeat now.

This place feels different now.

Nice.

You use this when the atmosphere has changed.

That explains a lot.

Say it again.

That explains a lot.

Good.

You say this when new information makes things clear.

Something doesn't feel right.

Your turn.

Something doesn't feel right.

Nice.

We use this when you feel something is wrong.

That was a close call.

Repeat now.

That was a close call.

Very good.

You say this when danger almost happened.

Everything is under control.

Say it again.

Everything is under control.

Good.

This sentence means the situation is managed.

That's exactly what we needed.

Your turn.

That's exactly what we needed.

Nice.

You use this when a solution fits perfectly.

This will take some time.

Repeat now.

This will take some time.

Good.

We say this when something won't be quick.

That's not how I see it.

Say it again.

That's not how I see it.

Very good.

You use this to show disagreement politely.

What's the plan now?

Your turn.

What's the plan now?

Nice.

You ask this when discussing next steps.

That could change everything.

Repeat now.

That could change everything.

Good.

This means it may have a big impact.

There's always another way.

Say it again.

There's always another way.

Nice.

We use this to show hope or solutions exist.

That's easier said than done.

Your turn.

That's easier said than done.

Very good.

You say this when something sounds easy but is hard to do.

This might actually work.

Repeat now.

This might actually work.

Nice.

You use this when success seems possible.

That was totally worth it.

Say it again.

That was totally worth it.

Good.

We say this when effort gives value.

Things didn't go as planned.

Your turn.

Things didn't go as planned.

Nice.

You use this when plans fail.

That's a step in the right direction.

Repeat now.

That's a step in the right direction.

Very good.

This means progress is happening.

Nothing can stop us now.

Say it again.

Nothing can stop us now.

Good.

We say this to show confidence.

That's the best part.

Your turn.

That's the best part.

Nice.

You use this to highlight a favorite moment.

This changes the whole picture.

Repeat now.

This changes the whole picture.

Good.

This means the situation looks different now.

That's something to celebrate.

Say it again.

That's something to celebrate.

Very good.

You say this when good news happens.

Everything feels so clear now.

Your turn.

Everything feels so clear now.

Nice.

We use this when confusion is gone.

That must have been stressful.

Repeat now.

That must have been stressful.

Good.

You say this to show empathy.

This is getting interesting.

Say it again.

This is getting interesting.

Nice.

You use this when things become exciting.

That's a smart move.

Your turn.

That's a smart move.

Very good.

We say this for a good decision.

This could be a turning point.

Repeat now.

This could be a turning point.

Nice.

This refers to a life-changing moment.

That's what matters the most.

Say it again.

That's what matters the most.

Good.

You use this to stress importance.

Everything is falling into place.

Your turn.

Everything is falling into place.

Nice.

We say this when things start working smoothly.

That's all we needed to hear.

Repeat now.

That's all we needed to hear.

Good.

You use this when information is enough.

This feels like the right decision.

Say it again.

This feels like the right decision.

Very good.

You say this when confident about a choice.

That's a huge relief.

Your turn.

That's a huge relief.

Nice.

We use this when stress disappears.

This will make things easier.

Repeat now.

This will make things easier.

Good.

You say this when difficulty reduces.

That's exactly the outcome we wanted.

Say it again.

That's exactly the outcome we wanted.

Very good.

This means the result is perfect.

Everything is finally coming together.

Your turn.

Everything is finally coming together.

Excellent.

We say this when plans start succeeding.

That's something we should think about.

Your turn.

That's something we should think about.

Good.

We use this when an idea needs consideration.

This won't be easy, but it's possible.

Repeat now.

This won't be easy, but it's possible.

Very good.

You say this when a task is difficult but achievable.

That's exactly what I was looking for.

Say it again.

That's exactly what I was looking for.

Nice.

We use this when something matches our need perfectly.

Everything is moving in the right direction.

Your turn.

Everything is moving in the right direction.

Excellent.

You say this when progress is positive.