

Today in this video, I will share 3 common English mistakes with you.
Mistakes that almost every English learner makes every day.
And I will show you how to fix them.
Right now.
In this one video.
But listen to my promise carefully.
If you watch this video until the end.
Your English can change today.
You will stop making these mistakes again and again.
You will sound more natural.
More fluent.
More confident.
Can I tell you something honestly?
You are making English mistakes right now.
Small mistakes.
Every single day.
And most of the time, you don't even notice them.
These mistakes confuse people when you speak.
They make your English sound unnatural.
And the worst part is this.
You study English every day.
You watch English videos.
You practice speaking.
But these mistakes still happen.
Again and again.
I know how this feels.
You want to speak English well.
But something always feels wrong.
Now here is the good news.
You are not making big mistakes.
You are making small mistakes.
And small mistakes are easy to fix.
So don't skip this video.

Stay with me until the very end.
Because mistake number 3 is very important.
Nobody talks about it.
But almost everyone makes it.
And when you fix this mistake,
People will notice the change in your English immediately.
Are you ready?
Let's start.

Mistake number one.
Using difficult words when speaking English.
This is a big problem.
Many English learners do this every day.
They use big words.
Difficult words.
Long words.
Words they learned from books.
Or from dictionary.
And they think this makes their English sound good.
But it does not.
It makes their English sound strange.
Unnatural.
Hard to understand.
Let me explain why this is a mistake.
When you speak English, you should sound natural.
You should sound like a normal person.
Not like a book.
Not like a robot.
Native English speakers use simple words.
Easy words.
Short words.
They do not use difficult words in daily conversation.
Let me give you examples.

You want to say you are tired.

Wrong way: I am extremely exhausted.

Right way: I am very tired.

See the difference?

Very tired is simple.

Easy to say.

Easy to understand.

Extremely exhausted sounds like a book.

It sounds too formal.

Too difficult.

Another example.

You want to say the weather is good.

Wrong way: The weather is magnificent today.

Right way: The weather is great today.

Or the weather is nice today.

Magnificent is a difficult word.

Native speakers do not use it in normal conversation.

They say great or nice.

Simple words.

Easy words.

One more example.

You want to say you will help someone.

Wrong way: I will assist you with this matter.

Right way: I will help you with this.

Assist sounds too formal.

Too difficult.

Help is the simple word.

The natural word.

Here is the truth.

When you use difficult words, people notice.

But not in a good way.

They think, why is this person talking like a book?

It sounds strange.

It sounds unnatural.

And sometimes they do not even understand you.
Because the word is too difficult.
Or you pronounce it wrong.
Let me show you more examples.
Instead of purchase, say buy.
Instead of commence, say start.
Instead of terminate, say end or finish.
Instead of require, say need.
Instead of sufficient, say enough.
Instead of obtain, say get.
Instead of utilize, say use.
Instead of indicate, say show.
Instead of construct, say build or make.
Instead of demonstrate, say show.
See how much easier the simple words are?
And native speakers use these simple words all the time.
They say buy, not purchase.
They say start, not commence.
They say need, not require.
Now I know what you are thinking.
But I learned these difficult words.
I studied them.
I want to use them.
Yes, you can use them.
But not in speaking.
Not in daily conversation.
Use them in writing.
In formal emails.
In business reports.
In essays.
But when you speak, keep it simple.
Keep it natural.
Here is another problem with difficult words.
Long sentences.

Many English learners make very long sentences.

They put many ideas in one sentence.

This makes it hard to understand.

Let me show you.

Wrong way: I was planning to go to the supermarket yesterday but unfortunately due to the heavy rain and bad weather conditions I decided to postpone my visit until today.

This sentence is too long.

Too complicated.

Hard to follow.

Right way: I wanted to go to the supermarket yesterday.

But it was raining heavily.

So I went today instead.

See the difference?

Three short sentences.

Easy to understand.

Easy to follow.

Clear.

Native speakers talk like this.

Short sentences.

Simple sentences.

One idea at a time.

Not everything in one long sentence.

Here is my advice for you.

When you speak English, think simple.

Use words you are comfortable with.

Words you know well.

Do not try to impress people with big words.

Just communicate clearly.

That is more important.

Make short sentences.

Five to ten words is good.

Not twenty or thirty words.

Say one idea.

Then stop.

Then say the next idea.

This makes you easy to understand.

This makes your English sound natural.

Let me give you practice examples.

Instead of saying: I am endeavoring to enhance my English speaking capabilities.

Say: I am trying to improve my English speaking.

Or even simpler: I want to speak English better.

Instead of saying: Could you provide me with some assistance regarding this issue?

Say: Can you help me with this?

Instead of saying: I appreciate your cooperation and support.

Say: Thank you for your help.

See how much easier it is?

How much more natural?

This is how native speakers talk.

Simple.

Clear.

Direct.

No fancy words.

No long sentences.

Just easy communication.

Here is what you should do today.

Listen to how native speakers talk.

Watch English movies.

Watch YouTube videos.

Listen to podcasts.

Notice the words they use.

They use simple words.

Easy words.

Common words.

They do not use dictionary words.

Then practice speaking the same way.

Use simple words.

Make short sentences.

Do not worry about sounding smart.

Worry about sounding natural.

Worry about being understood.

That is what matters.

Remember this rule.

Simple words are better than difficult words.

Short sentences are better than long sentences.

Clear communication is better than fancy language.

Follow this rule and your English speaking will improve so much.

People will understand you easily.

You will sound more natural.

More confident.

More like a native speaker.

This is the secret.

Keep it simple.

Ok next

Mistake number two.

Waiting to find an English partner before you practice speaking.

This is a huge mistake.

So many English learners make this mistake.

They say I need to find an English partner first.

I need someone to talk to.

Then I will practice speaking.

But here is the problem.

They wait and wait and wait.

Days pass.

Weeks pass.

Months pass.

And they still do not have a partner.

So they do not practice speaking at all.

Zero practice.

And their speaking does not improve.
Let me tell you the truth.
You do not need a partner to practice speaking English.
You can practice alone.
Right now.
Today.
By yourself.
I know what you are thinking.
How can I practice speaking alone?
I need someone to talk to, right?
No, you do not.
Let me show you how.
First way to practice alone.
Talk to yourself.
Yes, talk to yourself.
This sounds strange, I know.
But it works.
You can describe your day.
You can talk about what you are doing.
You can practice conversations in your head.
For example.
You are making breakfast.
Talk about it in English.
Say, I am making breakfast now.
I am cooking eggs.
I am making coffee.
The eggs smell good.
I am hungry.
See, you are speaking English.
No partner needed.
Another example.
You are walking outside.
Describe what you see.
Say, the weather is nice today.

The sky is blue.

There are many cars on the road.

I see a dog.

The dog is cute.

You are practicing speaking.

Using real English.

Building your speaking habit.

Second way to practice alone.

Read out loud.

Take any English text.

A book.

An article.

A story.

And read it out loud.

Not in your head.

Out loud.

Use your voice.

This helps your mouth get used to English sounds.

English words.

English sentences.

Your pronunciation gets better.

Your fluency gets better.

And you do not need any partner.

Third way to practice alone.

Record yourself speaking.

Use your phone.

Record yourself talking about any topic.

Talk for one minute.

Or two minutes.

About anything.

Your hobbies.

Your day.

Your family.

Your dreams.

Then listen to the recording.

Check your mistakes.

Check your pronunciation.

Then record again.

Do it better.

This is very powerful practice.

And again, no partner needed.

Fourth way to practice alone.

Answer questions out loud.

Find questions online.

Or make your own questions.

Then answer them in English.

Speak your answer out loud.

For example.

Question: What did you do yesterday?

Answer out loud: Yesterday I went to work.

I came home at six o'clock.

I cooked dinner.

I watched TV.

Then I went to bed.

You are practicing real conversation.

Real English.

But alone.

Fifth way to practice alone.

Think in English.

This is very important.

When you think during the day, think in English.

Not in your native language.

In English.

For example.

You are hungry.

Think in your mind, I am hungry.

I want to eat something.

Maybe I will eat rice.

Or maybe pizza.
You are planning your day.
Think in English.
Today I need to go to the store.
I need to buy milk.
And bread.
Then I will come home.
This builds your English brain.
Your English thinking.
And makes speaking easier later.
Sixth way to practice alone.
Shadowing.
This means you listen to English audio.
A podcast.
A video.
A movie.
And you repeat what they say.
At the same time.
Like a shadow.
This improves your pronunciation.
Your rhythm.
Your intonation.
Your natural speaking.
And you do it alone.
No partner needed.
Now let me tell you something important.
Finding an English partner is good.
Yes, it is helpful.
But it is not necessary to start.
You can practice alone first.
Build your confidence.
Build your skills.
Then when you find a partner, you will be ready.
You will speak better.

You will feel more confident.

But if you wait for a partner and do nothing, you waste time.

Months of time.

Years of time.

Do not make this mistake.

Start practicing today.

By yourself.

Talk to yourself.

Read out loud.

Record yourself.

Answer questions.

Think in English.

Do shadowing.

All of these work.

All of these improve your speaking.

And none of them need a partner.

Here is what many learners do wrong.

They think, I will practice when I find someone to talk to.

So they do nothing.

They just study grammar.

They just learn vocabulary.

But they do not speak.

Then when they finally meet someone, they cannot speak.

Because they never practiced.

Their mouth is not ready.

Their brain is not ready.

Do not be like this.

Practice speaking every day.

Even if you are alone.

Even if nobody is listening.

Just speak.

Out loud.

In English.

Every single day.

Five minutes is enough.

Ten minutes is better.

But do it every day.

This is the secret.

Daily practice.

Not waiting for perfect conditions.

Not waiting for a partner.

Just practice now.

With what you have.

Where you are.

By yourself.

After one month of daily practice alone, your speaking will improve so much.

You will notice the difference.

Your confidence will grow.

Your fluency will grow.

Your pronunciation will get better.

And then when you do find a partner, you will be ready.

You will speak well.

You will enjoy the conversation.

So stop waiting.

Stop making excuses.

Stop saying I need a partner first.

Start practicing alone today.

Right now.

After you finish watching this video.

Talk to yourself for five minutes.

In English.

About anything.

Just start.

This is how you improve.

This is how you become fluent.

Ok next

Mistake number three.

Not learning English with consistency.

This is the biggest mistake.

Almost every English learner makes this mistake.

And this is why most people never become fluent.

Let me explain what I mean.

Many people study English like this.

Monday, they study for three hours.

Very motivated.

Very excited.

They watch videos.

They practice speaking.

They learn new words.

Then Tuesday, nothing.

They are busy.

They are tired.

No English practice.

Wednesday, nothing again.

Thursday, nothing.

Friday, they remember, oh I need to study English.

So they study for two hours.

Saturday and Sunday, nothing.

Next week, same thing.

One day they study a lot.

Other days, nothing.

This is not consistency.

This does not work.

Your brain forgets everything.

You waste your time.

You waste your energy.

And you do not improve.

Let me tell you the truth about learning English.

Consistency is everything.

What does consistency mean?

It means you study every single day.

Not just when you feel motivated.

Not just when you have free time.

Every day.

Even if it is just ten minutes.

Even if it is just five minutes.

But every day.

No breaks.

No excuses.

This is how you learn English fast.

This is how you become fluent.

Let me show you why consistency works.

Your brain needs repetition.

It needs to see the same words again and again.

It needs to hear the same sounds again and again.

It needs to practice the same patterns again and again.

When you study every day, your brain remembers.

When you study once a week, your brain forgets.

It is that simple.

Think about it like this.

Imagine you want to build muscle.

You go to the gym on Monday.

You exercise for five hours.

Very hard.

Then you do not go to the gym for two weeks.

Then you go again for five hours.

Will you build muscle?

No.

You will just feel pain.

You will not see results.

But if you go to the gym every day for thirty minutes, you will build muscle.

You will see results.

You will get stronger.

English is the same.

Studying three hours once a week does not work.

Studying thirty minutes every day works.

This is the secret.

Daily practice.

Small amounts.

But every single day.

Let me give you a real example.

Student A studies English for four hours every Saturday.

That is four hours per week.

Student B studies English for thirty minutes every day.

That is three and a half hours per week.

Student A studies more hours total.

But Student B will improve faster.

Much faster.

Why?

Because Student B practices every day.

His brain remembers.

His skills build up.

His confidence grows.

Student A forgets everything between each Saturday.

He has to start over every week.

He does not build momentum.

He does not build habits.

Now let me tell you something important.

I know you are busy.

I know you have work.

You have family.

You have responsibilities.

You think you do not have time for English every day.

But here is the truth.

You do not need much time.

You just need consistency.

Ten minutes every day is enough.

Fifteen minutes is better.

Thirty minutes is great.

But even ten minutes works.

If you do it every day.

Let me show you how.

You wake up in the morning.

Spend ten minutes listening to an English podcast.

While you drink coffee.

While you get ready.

That is your English practice for the day.

Done.

Or you are going to work.

On the bus.

On the train.

In the car.

Spend ten minutes listening to English.

Or repeating English sentences.

That is your practice.

Done.

Or you have lunch break.

Spend ten minutes reading an English article.

On your phone.

Easy.

That is your practice.

Done.

Or before you sleep.

Spend ten minutes watching an English video.

Or talking to yourself in English.

That is your practice.

Done.

See how easy it is?

You do not need hours.

You do not need perfect conditions.

You just need ten minutes.

Every single day.
No matter what.
No excuses.
Busy day, ten minutes.
Tired day, ten minutes.
Weekend, ten minutes.
Holiday, ten minutes.
Sick day, maybe just five minutes.
But something.
Every day.
This is consistency.
This is how you win.
Now let me tell you what happens when you practice every day.
Week one, you feel good.
You are learning.
Week two, you start to notice small improvements.
You understand more.
Week three, you feel more confident.
Week four, people notice your English is better.
Month two, you can speak more easily.
Month three, English feels more natural.
Month six, you are surprised how much you improved.
People ask you, how did you learn English so fast?
And you say, I just practiced a little bit every day.
That is the secret.
Nothing special.
Nothing complicated.
Just consistency.
But here is the problem.
Most people do not have consistency.
They start strong.
First week, they study every day.
Second week, they miss one day.
Then two days.

Then they stop completely.

They lose motivation.

They forget their goal.

They give up.

Do not be like this.

Make a commitment today.

Promise yourself.

I will practice English every single day.

For the next thirty days.

No matter what.

Even if I am busy.

Even if I am tired.

Even if I do not feel motivated.

I will do at least ten minutes.

Every day.

Write this promise down.

Put it on your wall.

Look at it every morning.

Remind yourself.

And then do it.

Every single day.

Track your progress.

Make a calendar.

Every day you practice, put an X on that day.

Soon you will have a chain of X marks.

Do not break the chain.

Keep going.

One day at a time.

This is how you build consistency.

This is how you build habits.

This is how you learn English.

Let me give you one more tip.

Make it easy for yourself.

Do not make big goals like I will study for two hours every day.

This is too hard.

You will fail.

You will quit.

Instead, make a small goal.

I will study for ten minutes every day.

This is easy.

You can do this.

Anyone can do this.

And when it becomes a habit, you can increase it.

Fifteen minutes.

Twenty minutes.

Thirty minutes.

But start small.

Start easy.

But start every day.

Remember this.

Consistency beats intensity.

Ten minutes every day beats three hours once a week.

Small daily actions beat big occasional efforts.

Habits beat motivation.

This is the truth.

This is how language learning works.

So stop studying English in bursts.

Stop waiting for free time.

Stop making excuses.

Start practicing every single day.

Today.

Right now.

For just ten minutes.

Then tomorrow, another ten minutes.

Then the next day, another ten minutes.

Keep the chain going.

Do not break it.

After thirty days, you will be shocked at your progress.

After ninety days, you will be a different English speaker.

After six months, you will be fluent.

All because of consistency.

All because you practiced every single day.

This is the secret nobody tells you.

But now you know.

So go and do it.

Practice English every day.

No excuses.

No breaks.

Just consistency.

This is how you win.

Now you know the three big mistakes.

Using difficult words instead of simple words.

Waiting for a partner inst ead of practicing alone.

And not studying with consistency every single day.

These mistakes stop you from becoming fluent.

But now you can fix them.

Starting today.

Use simple English words when you speak.

Practice speaking alone every day.

And study for at least ten minutes every single day.

No excuses.

Do this and your English will improve fast.

I promise you.
