

Hello my friend.

In this podcast we will talk about the biggest problem in English learning.

Motivation.

You are not lazy.

You are not stupid.

You are not weak.

You just lost your why.

Most learners start English with excitement.

They watch videos.

They download apps.

They write new words.

They feel happy for some days.

Then life becomes busy.

Progress feels slow.

Mistakes feel heavy.

And motivation disappears.

If this is your story.

Please stay with me till the end.

Because this video can change how you feel about English forever.

Let me ask you one important question.

Why do you want to learn English?

Not what others say.

Not because everyone is learning.

But your real reason.

Is it for a better job?

Is it for confidence when you speak?

Is it to travel or work abroad?

Is it to understand movies and books?

Your why is your fuel.

When fuel is strong.

You keep moving.

When fuel is weak.

You stop easily.
So pause for a moment.
Think honestly.
Why does English matter in your life.
Can you feel that reason?
Keep listening.
Because the next part is very important.
Many people lose motivation because of one big mistake.
They expect fast results.
They want fluent English in weeks.
When it does not happen.
They feel disappointed.
English is a skill.
Not a switch.
It grows slowly.
Day by day.
Word by word.
Sentence by sentence.
If you accept slow progress.
You will stay calm.
And calm learners never quit.
Are you expecting fast results?
Or are you ready for real progress?

Now let us talk deeper about comparison.
Because comparison silently destroys motivation.
Many learners quit not because English is hard.
But because they compare too much.
You open social media.
You see someone speaking fluent English.
You hear perfect pronunciation.
You think.
Why not me?
Why am I so slow?

Why do I make mistakes?
This thinking is very dangerous.
Because you are comparing your first step.
With someone else's final result.
You do not see their practice hours.
You do not see their failures.
You do not see their fear when they start.
You only see confidence.
And you judge yourself.
This is unfair to you.
Everyone starts with broken English.
Everyone makes mistakes.
Even fluent speakers once felt shy.
Even teachers once struggled.
English learning is not a race.
There is no finish line.
There is only progress.
Some people walk fast.
Some people walk slowly.
But walking slowly is still walking.
Stopping is the real failure.
If today you understand one new word.
That is growth.
If today you speak one sentence.
That is a success.
Stop asking.
Why am I not like them?
Start asking.
Am I better than yesterday?
This one question will save your motivation.
Your speed does not matter.
Your direction matters.
Your journey is your own.
Respect your journey.

Remember this.
Comparison steals joy.
But progress builds confidence.
Focus on your small wins.
Write them down.
Celebrate them.
Because one day.
Someone will compare themselves with you.

Now let us go deeper into habit and consistency.
Because this is where most learners fail.
Many people wait for motivation.
They say.
Today I am tired.
Today I am busy.
I will start tomorrow.
Tomorrow is next week.
Next week becomes next month.
And English stays the same.
Listen carefully.
Motivation is not reliable.
Some days you feel excited.
Some days you feel empty.
If you depend on feeling.
You will quit.
But if you depend on a habit.
You will continue.
Habit means doing English.
Even when you do not feel like it.
Even when energy is low.
Even when confidence is low.
Five minutes.
One sentence.
One short audio.

This is enough.
Small actions every day.
Create big results over time.
Think about brushing your teeth.
Do you wait for motivation?
No.
You do it because it is a habit.
Make English the same.
Not special.
Not heavy.
Just normal.
Just daily.
Now let us talk about shadowing practice.
This is very powerful for beginners.
You do not need grammar rules.
You do not need translation.
You only need your ears and your voice.
Listen to one short sentence.
Play it again.
Pause.
Repeat with the speaker.
Copy the sound.
Copy the rhythm.
Copy the speed.
Do not worry about mistakes.
No one is judging you.
Shadowing builds confidence.
Shadowing builds fluency.
Shadowing makes English feel natural.
Even five minutes of shadowing.
Is better than one hour of thinking.
Are you practicing English.
Or only thinking about English?
Another big problem is fear.

Fear of mistakes.
Fear of wrong pronunciation.
Fear of people laughing.
This fear keeps you silent.
But silence never improves English.
Mistakes are not enemies.
Mistakes are teachers.
Every mistake shows you a weak point.
And weak points help you grow.
Fluent speakers are not perfect speakers.
They are brave speakers.
They speak even when unsure.
They speak even when wrong.
That is why they improve.
So allow yourself to be bad at English.
This is how you become good.
Now ask yourself honestly.
Do you want comfort?
Or do you want progress?
Because you cannot have both.
Stay with me.
Because the final part is very important.

Now let us talk about progress and patience.
This is where many learners lose hope.
They study every day.
But they feel nothing is changing.
This feeling is very common.
Progress in English is silent.
You do not feel it daily.
But it is happening.
Think about a plant.
You water it every day.
But you do not see change every morning.

If you stop watering.
The plant dies.
If you stay patient.
One day you see leaves.
English works the same way.
Do not ask every day.
Am I fluent now?
Ask instead.
Did I practice today?
Did I listen today?
Did I try today?
If the answer is yes.
You are moving forward.
Another powerful tool is tracking.
Most learners do not track anything.
They only feel.
Feelings are confusing.
Write what you learned today.
One word.
One sentence.
Record your voice once a week.
After one month.
Listen again.
You will be surprised.
This surprise creates motivation.
Now let us talk about the environment.
Your environment shapes your behavior.
If English is not around you.
You will forget it.
Change small things.
Phone language to English.
Follow English pages.
Listen to simple English daily.
Make English visible.

Make English normal.

And now.

Let us return to your why.

Your why is not only a sentence.

Your why is emotion.

When you feel tired.

Remember your future self.

Remember why you started.

Write it somewhere.

Read it often.

Imagine yourself speaking English calmly.

Imagine yourself understanding without fear.

This image is powerful.

It pulls you forward.

Even on hard days.

Let me ask you one last question.

If you quit today.

Where will you be after one year?

And if you continue.

Where will you be after one year?

The choice is yours.

Do not quit.

Not today.

Not again.

Stay with me.

The final message is coming.

Now listen very carefully.

English is not just a language.

English is confidence.

English is an opportunity.

English is freedom.

When you avoid English.

You are not avoiding a language.

You are avoiding growth.

You do not need talent.

You do not need a perfect accent.

You do not need expensive courses.

You only need one decision.

The decision to not quit.

Again and again.

Some days you will feel strong.

Some days you will feel weak.

That is normal.

But remember this.

You are not behind.

You are just learning.

And learning takes time.

Every small step counts.

Every sentence matters.

Every mistake helps you grow.

Do not wait for confidence.

Confidence comes after action.

Speak first.

Confidence will follow.

Now let us do one last shadowing practice together.

Repeat after me slowly.

I am consistent.

I am patient.

I am improving every day.

English is becoming easier for me.

If you reached this part of the video.

You are serious about English.

And I am proud of you.

Now it is your turn.

Will you quit again?

Or will you continue this time?
